

Benefit from a rapid increase in fashion jewelry and accessory output in Indonesia

Published: July 2012

Indonesia's fashion jewelry and accessories industry has been exhibiting continued growth in annual exports over the past three years.

The development is driven by revitalized demand from major markets such as the US, which is gradually recovering from the global economic crisis. Shipments to emerging destinations such as the Asia-Pacific region, the Middle East and South America are also increasing.

The industry relies on a number of strengths to keep up with growing turnover and cope with intense competition from other sourcing centers in Asia. The most important of these is accessibility to various types of natural materials that result in designs not readily available from other supply hubs. Companies also generally have low MOQs, which provides flexibility to customers.

This report focuses on the main types of fashion jewelry and accessories from Indonesia – jewelry, fashion bags and wallets, belts, and headwear and neckwear.
