

Benefit from a rapid increase in solar panel and power system output in mainland China

Published: June 2012

Amid the market contraction in the EU, the past year saw several small and midsize suppliers of solar panels and power systems in China shifting to other product lines. A number have shut down completely. Among large enterprises, some reported significant cuts in net profit.

Projecting further declines in EU demand and faced with anti-dumping tariffs in the US, manufacturers are implementing various strategies to expand their customer base. Many are exploring opportunities in South and Central America, the Asia-Pacific region, the Middle East and Africa. Some companies are looking into the domestic market for better business prospects.

This report covers the major products of China's solar panels and power systems industry, namely crystalline and thin-film PV panels, and portable and fixed PV power systems.
